Fort Bend ISD today released its Long-Range Boundary Planning (LRBP) feedback survey, which offers an opportunity for all stakeholders to provide input on draft attendance boundary scenarios for elementary campuses, including proposed closures, and the opening of Amy Coleman Middle School. The survey is part of the district's ongoing work to balance enrollment, responsibly use facilities, and establish long-term solutions that best support students, families, and the community.

The survey is open now through 11:59 PM on Sunday, January 25, 2026. All staff and the primary parent/guardian in Skyward Q will receive an email link from the Fort Bend ISD Organizational Development Department. All other stakeholders can access the survey link on the district website.

"We know these conversations can be emotional because our schools are more than just buildings, they are places where relationships are built, traditions are formed, and children grow," said Beth Martinez, Deputy Superintendent Chief of Staff at Fort Bend ISD. "That is why it is so important for us to listen. Every piece of feedback helps inform decisions that honor our community while ensuring we can serve students well, both today and for generations to come."

While draft plans were previously presented to the Board of Trustees, no final decisions have been made, and community input remains a critical part of the Long-Range Boundary Planning process. Additional details and access to the survey are available at www.fortbendisd.com/attendanceboundaries.
