

Teaching is a tool of empowerment that allows you to enhance your skill-set and makes a difference in lives of your students by challenging their intellectual faculties. It is a way where you make your contribution in the society by guiding the students to lead the future.

My role as an educator is to offer quality education and training of the highest caliber so that the students can confidently apply this knowledge in their professional and personal lives. As a teacher, I am committed to providing an interactive and an exciting learning environment in which students can pursue learning in a useful practical fashion. I would utilize effective teaching techniques by encouraging student participation and teamwork in the class. Since each student is unique and brings along a distinct set of talent, my aim would be to optimize the best of that student's potential.

Teaching is not an activity; it is an on-going process. I am excitingly looking forward to teaching where I would also have the opportunity to learn from students' experiences. I am determined to making a change and would strive to do whatever is the best for the students. When a student shows success after a period of struggle and I see their face light up with joy, this is the point when I know that I have accomplished my goal.
